Career Day At Princeton

Special to Newark News.

PRINCETON—Some 275 Princeton juniors will participate in career conferences tomorrow under the auspices of the university's Alumni Association.

Consisting of panels in six broad areas of interest, the conferences are designed to provide opportunity for participants to direct questions about career planning to alumni with extensive experience in their respective fields.

Panel moderators are: Arthur W. Horton of South Orange, an engineer with Bell Telephone Laboratories—science and engineering; Lyman B. Kirkpatrick Jr. of Fairfax, Va., inspector general of the Central Intelligence Agency—government service; Thatcher W. Longstretch of Philadelphia, vice president of the advertising firm of Aitkin-Kynett Co., Inc.—business.

Also Benjamin R. Jones of Philadelphia, justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania—law; Fred B. Rogers of Philadelphia, professor of preventive medicine, Temple University Hospital and School of Medicine—medicine; and Rev. David W. Romig of New York, pastor of the Sea and Land Church—teaching and the ministry.
